Congresswoman Titus was also recognized for her distinguished career in higher education.

In acceptance, the congresswoman pledged her ongoing support to issues of importance to the Greek American community and stated she is proud of her membership and work in the Congressional Caucus on Hellenic Issues and the Congressional Hellenic Israel Alliance. She commended AHI for its continued presence on Capitol Hill, especially in light of recent developments in the eastern Mediterranean. Congresswoman Titus offered that the community "must stay united" on these issues in order to ensure the community remains effective in its advocacy efforts.

which IOCC works to address humanitarian needs worldwide.

In acceptance of the AHI Hellenic Heritage National Public Service Award for her exemplary service to God and Church and decades of leadership for Hellenism, Paulette Poulos, remarked, “It is with great humility that I join the outstanding recipients of the Hellenic Heritage & National Public Service Award, which carries special meaning for me. The AHI stands as a sentinel for Hellenism in America, Greece, Cyprus and around the world, always having alerted us to the challenges we face and actions to be pursued as good citizens involved in public affairs, true to our Hellenic Heritage, since its founding in a year of crisis with the invasion of Cyprus in 1974. However, that alertness has defined who we are as Hellenes from the dawn of our great civilization.”

The Leadership 100 executive director also paid homage to the late Archbishop Iakovos, whom she said was “...a great American leader as well as a leader of world Hellenism” who “...fought for Greece, Cyprus and all humanitarian causes and never accepted defeat. He was a visionary and a man of great faith and courage.”

Timothy J. Maniatis received the AHI Hellenic Heritage National Public Service Award for his lifetime of service and leadership to the Hellenic community and for extraordinary achievement in the field of association and special event management. Over his career he has been the executive director of AHEPA and the National Hellenic Society as well as working on behalf of the Greek Orthodox Archdiocese to organize special events such as the Clergy-Laity Congress.

He said, “I’d like to thank the American Hellenic Institute for bestowing this prestigious award to me, and through me, to my family, who has supported me throughout the years.”

Maniatis recounted how his outreach as AHEPA executive director to his congressman on Cyprus led to his relationship with AHI Founder Gene Rossides, who provided further encouragement to work on behalf of the Greek American community.

“We have accomplished a great deal; however, we need to respect the goals and objectives of our youth and slowly assimilate them into our community,” he added.

In conclusion, Jerry Couvaras accepted the AHI Hellenic Heritage Achievement Award for innovation in the hospitality industry and commitment to the promotion and preservation of Hellenism.

In acceptance, the President and CEO of Atlanta Bread and Bake One said, “It was soon after August of 1974 that I first heard of the American Hellenic Institute and Gene Rossides. We were impressed by the fervor and relentless vigor of this organization and how it managed to reach and engage important politicians. My congratulations and gratitude is extended to Gene Rossides for his founding and lifelong dedication to AHI and to Nick Larigakis for his tireless work and passion. I thank the board of AHI and its members for this fine honor. And I salute American Greeks for all they do to enhance the lives and the well-being of Hellenism and Hellenes through- out the world.”

The honorees’ many accomplishments were celebrated throughout the evening, and highlighted in congratulatory letters submitted to AHI by His Eminence Archbishop Demetrios, Ambassador of Greece to the United States Christos Panagopoulos, Ambassador of the Republic of Cyprus to the United States George Chacalli, Hellenic American National Council President Paul Kotrotsios, and Ted G. Spyropoulos, Theodore & Erika Spyropoulos Foundation.

AHI CELEBRATES GREEK INDEPENDENCE DAY AT THE WHITE HOUSE

AHI celebrated Greek Independence Day at the White House on April 4, 2014. AHI President Nick Larigakis, AHI Board Treasurer and Legal Counsel Nicholas G. Karambelas, Esq., AHI Board Member Leon Andris, and AHI Foundation Board Vice President Ted G. Spyropoulos attended the ceremony officiated by President Barack Obama, Vice President Joe Biden and His Eminence Archbishop Demetrios.

“We thank President Obama for hosting this event to honor Greek Independence,” Larigakis said. “The event served to reaffirm the strong bonds of friendship between Greece and the United States, including Greece as a valued NATO ally; and to bring attention to the fact that this relationship is etched intrinsically by virtue of the noble democratic ideals and principles that guided our Founding Fathers in establishing our own country.”

CAPITOL HILL BRIEFING RECAPS HISTORIC MISSION

AHI President Larigakis recounts his experiences about the mission with the audience.

AHI President Nick Larigakis participated at a briefing on Capitol Hill, Feb. 25, 2014, that presented the findings from the historic three-country Leadership Mission to Israel, Cyprus, and Greece, which occurred in January.

“We appreciated the opportunity to share our experiences and observations from the historic mission to a very important audience,” President Larigakis said. “The trilateral relationship between Greece, Cyprus, and Israel is critical to stability in the eastern Mediterranean, and it must be supported by the United States. Our findings from the mission reaffirmed this notion and this message must be emphasized in Washington.”

The briefing, titled “The Israel-Cyprus-Greece Relationship: From Emerging to Sustained Relations & U.S. Role - Findings from Historic Joint Leadership Mission to Israel, Cyprus, and Greece,” also featured mission organizers AHEPA Executive Director Basil Mossaidis and B’nai B’rith International Executive Vice President Daniel Mariaschin as speakers. Andrew Kaffes, a participant on the mission, moderated the briefing.

In attendance were two members of Hellenic Parliament,

Kostas Karagounis and Vasileios Kikilias, both of whom have worked to build the Greece-Israel Friendship Group in the parliament. The briefing was held in cooperation with the Congressional Hellenic Israel Alliance.

AHI SUBMITS FY2015 FOREIGN AID TESTIMONY TO HOUSE APPROPRIATORS

AHI submitted testimony to the House of Representatives Appropriations Subcommittee on State, Foreign Operations, and Related Programs on the Obama Administration’s foreign aid proposals for FY2015 on April 4, 2014.

In the best interests of the United States, AHI’s testimony opposed any military assistance the administration will request for Turkey until Turkey removes its troops and illegal Turkish settlers from Cyprus; aid the administration will request for the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia (FYROM); and any reduction that might be introduced in the aid levels for the UN Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus. In addition, the testimony stated United States foreign assistance will be helpful if appropriated toward the implementation of some of the Confidence Building Measures (CBMs) proposed by the Republic of Cyprus, for example, the Famagusta CBM package, which are vital to sustain and uphold the positive momentum created by the resumption of the peace negotiations on the island aimed at its reunification.

The Hill Publishes AHI President’s Commentary on FYROM

The Hill, a newspaper with a focus on the U.S. Congress, published on its website a guest commentary authored by AHI President Nick Larigakis titled, “Congress should back ally Greece on ‘Macedonia’ name issue.” The commentary appeared on the website’s Global Affairs blog, which is The Hill’s international relations blog, January 6, 2014. AHI President Larigakis wrote the commentary in response to a Dec. 6 guest commentary for the Global Affairs blog written by United Macedonian Diaspora President Metodija Koloski.

“We believe Congress can right a wrong on U.S. policy toward Greece and the FYROM,” Larigakis wrote. “We have long called on Congress to adopt legislation urging the FYROM to cease its use of propaganda that violates provisions of the United Nations-brokered Interim Agreement between Greece and the FYROM and that further urges the FYROM to work with Greece to find a mutually acceptable official name under U.N. auspices. In the recent past, such legislation has had strong bipartisan support in both chambers of Congress.”

In his guest commentary, UMD President Koloski asserted that Greece somehow is obstructing and destabilizing “Macedonia” from making progress as a country. Larigakis rebuts his assertions by demonstrating how FYROM’s provocative actions have demonstrated an unwillingness to find a solution and how Greece has demonstrated compromise to find a solution. Larigakis concluded, "...it is time for the U.S. Congress to take sides in the name-recognition issue—not in favor of Greece or FYROM, but in the best interests of the United States."

The National Herald Publishes AHI Foundation Student Essays

AHI is pleased to announce that three essays authored by participants of the fifth annual American Hellenic Institute Foundation (AHIF) College Student Foreign Policy Trip to Greece and Cyprus were published by The National Herald in December 2013. The three essays that were published by the newspaper are: "A Call to Live Up to American Values in the Eastern Mediterranean," by George Gabriel and published on Dec. 13, 2013; "Hellenic Armed Forces: An Important International Ally," by Despina Vastakis and published on Dec. 16, 2013; and "The Greek Crisis and Foreign Policy: The Good, the Bad, and the Ugly," by Elissa Bowling and published on Dec. 19, 2013. The students' insightful essays describe their personal experiences from the trip to Greece and Cyprus held June 19 to July 6.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Washington Times Publishes AHI's Letter on Cyprus

The Washington Times published the American Hellenic Institute's letter to the editor, "Turkey not committed to Cyprus peace," March 6, 2014. AHI President Nick Larigakis wrote the letter in response to a February 25, 2014 letter to the editor submitted by Mr. Ahemet Erdengiz.

President Larigakis rebuts Mr. Erdengiz's letter by identifying two key points where the latter was off-base on Cyprus. The first point pertained to Turkey's invasion of the Republic of Cyprus and the second point identified the flaws of the failed Annan Plan.

AHI's Letter to The Washington Post Welcomes Critique of Turkey

AHI released a letter to the editor it submitted to The Washington Post in response to a January 23, 2014 opinion piece titled "The United States needs to tell Turkey to change course," by Morton Abramowitz and Eric Edelman, two former U.S. ambassadors to Turkey; and Blaise Misztal, acting director of foreign policy, Bipartisan Policy Center's Turkey Initiative.

The authors of the opinion piece assert that Turkish Prime Minister Recep Tayyip Erdogan is "destroying his country's parlous democracy" which is creating "a pressing dilemma for the United States." They argue for the United States to make it clear that the prime minister's actions are endangering the U.S.-Turkey relationship.

In his letter, AHI President Nick Larigakis applauds their critique of the prime minister's actions writing, "It was refreshing to read that former State Department officials stationed in Turkey are calling for the U.S. government to get tough with Turkey...For far too long U.S. policy toward Turkey has been one of appeasement and double standard." Larigakis also provides examples of how Turkey ignores democratic ideals, specifically the rule of law, especially as it pertains to Turkey's neighbors, including Greece, Cyprus, and Israel. Larigakis concludes, "The Obama Administration must change the United States' long-standing policy of appeasement with Turkey and demand it respect democratic values, institutions, and the rule of law or else there will be strong consequences. This approach will serve the best interests of Turkey and the U.S."

Halki Seminary Not Bilateral Issue AHI Says to The Washington Post

AHI released a letter to the editor it submitted to The Washington Post in response to a March 5, 2014 Associated Press article titled "Orthodox seminary in Turkey awaiting reopening," by Ayse Wieting.

In his letter, AHI President Nick Larigakis criticizes Turkish Prime Minister Recep Tayyip Erdogan's position that the reopening of the Theological School of Halki depends on reciprocal measures from Greece, stating the prime minister is incorrect. "The Turkish government's illegal closure of the seminary is not a bilateral issue to be resolved between the two countries; but rather, it is a universal issue of fundamental religious freedom and human rights that Turkey continues to suppress," Larigakis wrote.

AHI's Letter to Forbes Corrects Inaccuracies with Cyprus Op-Ed

AHI sent a letter to the editor to Forbes to correct inaccuracies written about Cyprus in a March 17, 2014 op-ed titled "Obama's Secret Weapon Against Putin's Crimea Vote?" by Richard Minter.

In his letter, AHI President Nick Larigakis criticizes Mr. Minter for inaccurately identifying Mr. Ozdil Nami as the "foreign minister of Cyprus." Larigakis wrote: "[Minter] should have done his homework and referenced Mr. Nami as the self-styled 'foreign minister' of an illegal entity, the 'Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus,' which is only recognized by one country—Turkey."

Larigakis sets the record straight with regard to the correct and legal description of the sovereignty of the Republic of Cyprus, the nature of the Turkish invasion and subsequent occupation of Cyprus, and what the potential implications are for energy finds in the eastern Mediterranean. Although Mr. Minter revised his op-ed, he still gets it wrong, referring to Mr. Nami as "the foreign minister of Northern Cyprus." He also locates Cyprus as being "between Turkey and Greece is the Eastern Mediterranean," which is not accurate.

AHI Sets Record Straight on Cyprus to Washington Times

AHI submitted a letter to the Washington Times in response to an April 8, 2014 article titled "Negotiator says U.S. was wrong to back U.N. plan for Cyprus in 2004," by Ashish Kumar Sen. In his letter, AHI President Nick Larigakis expresses dismay that the journalist inaccurately reported Mr. Ozdil Nami as the “the foreign minister of the Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus.”

AHI GENERAL NEWS

“Such inaccuracies only embolden the “TRNC’s” separatist policy and hamper negotiations,” Larigakis wrote.

Larigakis also sets the record straight about Turkey’s two-phase invasion of the Republic of Cyprus and the Turkish Cypriot leadership’s declared establishment of the “Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus” as an illegal and invalid act by the international community.

NOON FORUM

Forum Examines Religious Liberty in Middle East, Turkey

AHI hosted a noon forum titled, “Pogrom Against Christians Sweeps Middle East: What is the State of Religious Minorities in Turkey?” featuring Doug Bandow, senior fellow, Cato Institute, on February 3, 2014, at AHI’s Hellenic House.

“The topic we are examining today unfortunately does not get much play in the American mainstream media,” AHI President Nick Larigakis said. “With regard to Turkey, we are all aware of the plight of the Ecumenical Patriarchate, however, a broad spectrum of religious minorities in Turkey, including some sects of Islam, also struggle there. We appreciate Doug Bandow’s research and work in this field and for his time to provide us with his thoughts and expertise on the topic today.”

AHI GENERAL NEWS

Doug Bandow, Senior Fellow at the Cato Institute.

Bandow's presentation provided background about the continued persecution facing Christian minorities living in the Middle East prior to drawing comparisons with the current treatment of minorities in Turkey and areas where Turkish Prime Minister Erdogan's government needs to improve. According to Bandow, Turkish persecution reaches beyond their Christian citizens and continues to be increasingly anti-Semitic as well. If Turkey wants a bigger role on the international stage, they need to allow people to exert their religious rights, Bandow asserted.

Bandow added that today, persecution around the world can technically fall into two categories: secular extremism (such as that in a communist regime) or a state or group which uses religion to suppress any other religious groups (such as Islamic extremism). For the better part of its modern history, Turkey always had adapted Kemalist secularism. Bandow pointed out that even if its leadership decides to take the country in a more Islamist direction, it does not mean that the religious minorities within the country need to be suppressed.

Although religious liberty does tend to get "short-shrifted" in Washington, Bandow reminded attendees that "this is a matter of human rights...of what a decent society is." Following Bandow's presentation, President Larigakis offered closing remarks, and he moderated a Q&A session with the audience.

"To that end, we present work from authors of various nations and have a special interest in promoting discourse in the Hellenic Diaspora and hearing from emerging as well as established scholars and activists."

Senate Committee's Passage of Armenian Genocide Resolution Applauded

AHI applauds passage of S. Res. 410 an Armenian Genocide Resolution by the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations on April 10, 2014 that remembers and observes the anniversary of the Armenian Genocide on April 24, 2014.

Senate Resolution 410 expresses the sense of the Senate: (1) in remembrance of the anniversary of the Armenian Genocide on April 24, 2014; (2) that the President should work toward an Armenian-Turkish relationship that includes Turkey's full acknowledgment of the facts about the Armenian Genocide; and (3) that the President should ensure that U.S. foreign policy reflects appropriate understanding and sensitivity concerning issues related to human rights, crimes against humanity, ethnic cleansing, and genocide documented in the U.S. record relating to the Armenian Genocide.

AHI has long called for an end to America's denial of the Armenian Genocide and include the recognition of the Assyrian, Pontian and Anatolian Greek Genocides as defined by the U.N. Genocide Convention as stated in AHI's Annual Policy Statement.

AHI Disappointed with Pro-FYROM Congressional Action on NATO

AHI issued the following statement in response to congressional action to support membership for the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia's (FYROM) in NATO at the 2014 NATO Summit, which is hosted by the United Kingdom.

The statement read, in part, "The American Hellenic Institute is profoundly disappointed with a congressional letter to Secretary of State John Kerry signed by 40 U.S. representatives that backs FYROM's membership in NATO. In particular, we are disappointed that the letter has the support of U.S. Representative Eliot Engel, who is the ranking member of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs, and U.S. Representative William Keating, ranking member, House Foreign Affairs Subcommittee on Europe, Eurasia, and Emerging Threats; and U.S. Representatives Albio Sires and Grace Meng, members of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs. All four legislators are members of the Congressional Caucus on Hellenic Issues and have been big supporters on issues of concern to the Greek American community in the past. Under the administration of Prime Minister Nikola Gruevski, FYROM follows a long-term policy of extreme nationalism and provocation against Greece in conflict with NATO and European values of good neighborly relations.”

AHIF Announces Its Newest Publication: Kissinger & Cyprus: A Study in Lawlessness

AHIF is pleased to announce its newest publication, Kissinger & Cyprus: A Study in Lawlessness by Gene Rossides and a Foreword by Professor Louis Galambos, Johns Hopkins University, and Editor of The Papers of Dwight David Eisenhower. This book explores four themes. The first is Kissinger’s illegal actions and responsibility for the Cyprus tragedy of 1974 and its aftermath. The second is Cyprus’s importance as a strategic, economic, and political asset to Europe and the United States. The third theme is Turkey’s actions as a rogue state, its violations of United States and international laws, its history of unreliability as an ally and its moves towards Islamic fundamentalism. The fourth theme is the vital importance to the United States of absolute allegiance to the rule of law. The concluding chapter discusses the need for the United States to redress the situation in Cyprus by pressuring Turkey to withdraw its troops and settlers from Cyprus.

The author hopes that this volume will generate renewed interest in the Cyprus problem, the importance of the rule of law in U.S. foreign policy and the responsibility of the United States to redress the situation in Cyprus.

AHI Welcomes U.S.-Greece-Israel Military Exercise

AHI welcomes the start of the two-week trilateral naval exercise “Noble Dina 2014” between the United States, Greece, and Israel. The multinational exercise is held in the eastern Mediterranean off of the Greek island of Crete.

“We welcome the continued trilateral military cooperation exhibited between the United States, Greece, and Israel,” AHI President Nick Larigakis said. “Clearly it demonstrates the significant value of Greece as a pivotal ally to the United States that lends stability and security in the eastern Mediterranean through NSA Souda Bay, Crete as well as a reliable ally to Israel in the region. Noble Dina enhances the cooperation between the navies of the three countries.” Noble Dina is the fourth exercise conducted by the United States, Greece, and Israel.

AHI Releases Annual Policy Statements

AHI announced the release of its annual Policy Statements. The policy statements discuss issues affecting the Greek American community as they pertain to United States relations with Greece, Cyprus, and Turkey. In addition, the statements include AHI’s fact sheet detailing Greece’s contributions to United States interests in the eastern Mediterranean and to NATO.

“We strongly urge everyone to utilize the policy statements to their full potential, educating policymakers and creating awareness of the issues to the community at-large,” AHI President Nick Larigakis said. “The positions presented advocate for the application of the rule of law and are in the best interests of the United States. We also sincerely thank the large number of organizations that have endorsed the policy statements.”

Cato Institute Commentary Applauded; Rossides’ Book Cited

AHI welcomes a blog commentary published by the Cato Institute titled, “Washington’s Inconsistent Stance on Territorial Integrity” by Dr. Ted Galen Carpenter, a senior fellow for defense and foreign policy studies at Cato. In light of recent events in Ukraine, the April 16, 2014 commentary draws attention to Washington’s inconsistent track record regarding the respect for sovereignty and territorial integrity of countries. Dr. Carpenter cites Cyprus as one example, and he furthermore points to AHI Founder Gene Rossides’ new book, Kissinger and Cyprus: A Study in Lawlessness, stating it makes a “solid case” that the Nixon administration aided Ankara’s aggression toward Cyprus.

Dr. Carpenter writes: “The Turkish government certainly has never paid a significant price for invading and partitioning its neighbor. Nor has it done so for later establishing a secessionist entity, the Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus, in the occupied territory and bringing in tens of thousands of settlers from the Turkish mainland.”

MEMBER SPOTLIGHT

Ambassador Recounts Upbringing, Foreign Service Experiences

Ambassador Patrick Theros is an individual many of us are familiar with due to his vast range of experiences internationally, in Washington, DC and within the Greek-American community. The ambassador was born in 1941 in Ann Arbor, Michigan. Both of his parents found themselves in the United States having left Greece at different times and in rather unique ways. His father, having served in the Greek Navy during the Balkan Wars, immigrated from Lefkada at the end of 1913 to Sioux City, Iowa. After working there on the railroads for a period of time, he then moved to Detroit to "warm up," as Ambassador Theros quoted him. He ran bars and restaurants and imported Canadian whiskey during Prohibition before moving to Ann Arbor where he was instrumental in creating two institutions: the Greek Orthodox Church of St. Nickolas and The Brown Jug Restaurant (of particular importance to University of Michigan students).

Ambassador Theros's mother was born on the island of Chios in 1910. She herself was a small child when the Greek Navy liberated Chios in 1912, likely unaware that Theros's father was a sailor aboard one of those Greek marine ships. She went to the University of Athens and was one of only four women who graduated from the University in 1930. Following her graduation, she insisted that she be assigned as a high school teacher in Macedonia at a time when Bulgarian terrorists were killing Greek school teachers. Theros's grandfather, a priest, refused to allow her to do this ensuing in a huge fight between the two of them and as a result, she chose to sneak her way to America. In 1935, Theros's grandfather was on the wrong side of the failed Plastiras coup and also fled to the U.S. He was made the first priest of the new St. Nickolas Church in Ann Arbor.

"The rest," Theros says, "is history. I belabor these facts because they were an essential part of my version of being Greek and my character."

After graduating from Georgetown University's School of Foreign Service, Ambassador Theros served as a member of the United States Foreign Service from 1963 until 1999. Fluent in Greek, Spanish and Arabic, Theros worked in Qatar, Jordan, Nicaragua, UAE, Syria, Lebanon and Nicaragua and served as U.S. Ambassador to Qatar from 1995 to 1998. When asked, for what one can only assume is the umpteenth time, which post is his favorite; his answer was both diplomatic and honest.

"Every post was interesting and every post had its frustrations," Ambassador Theros says. "However, I came out of each position happy that I'd been there. More often than not, I'd leave a place saying, 'there's a great country going to hell,'" he laughs. He maintained that in actuality, he learned something new and left behind dear friends in each of his posts, something for which he remains grateful.

Ambassador Theros related how his Greek background helped his professional career immensely, both in unusual and in more conventional ways.

"We don't have the time to fully detail how my Hellenic background played an important and positive role in my life and career. Suffice it to say that Arabs love Greeks and a Greek American diplomat can dine out on it forever," Theros says.

One of his first conversations (of many similar ones) in Saudi Arabia, after about four months of living there, began with a question: “Are you American?” Although he’d say, “Yes, I am an American,” the questions persisted. “You don’t look American,” they’d reply. “Where were you born?” Perplexed to find that the Ambassador was indeed born in Michigan, they would keep at it, finally arriving at the inevitable: “Where was your father from?” Upon learning that Theros’s father was born in Greece the conversant would then nod knowingly and say, “Ah, you’re Eastern like we are!”

Apparently, Italians are not the only ones who hold the “una faccia, una razza” principle close to heart.

“You have no idea how often Arabs would tell me in great detail how Greeks are culturally native to the Middle East and the eastern Mediterranean,” Ambassador Theros says. “Native peoples like the Greeks are not considered a foreign people in that part of the world. The Orthodox Church, for example, is considered by locals to be a native church, not a foreign church.” Greeks are thought to be “with” them, meaning that in the “them against us” perspective that is frequently used amongst local populations, we are part of the “us.” “The fact that I was culturally and genetically Greek,” Theros shares, “meant that I was one of them. Not only that, it made the environment instantly more welcoming and easier in which to have conversations.”

Ambassador Theros went on to say that this made his posts in the Middle East a bit more like home as opposed to his posting in Nicaragua.

“The main reason why I missed Saudi Arabia so much when I was sent to Nicaragua was primarily because Greeks are culturally a thousand years closer to Saudis than they are to Nicaraguans, despite the population being Muslim,” Theros says, adding there are a lot of Greeks and Arab Orthodox Christians in Saudi Arabia and high numbers of local Orthodox Christians living in Syria and Lebanon.

“A phrase that I heard for the first time while living there,” Theros says, “was that Greeks have ‘blue bones.’ This means, essentially, that we were there first. We are more ‘native’ than they are.”

When asked what advice he would give young people interested in pursuing a career in the Foreign Service, Ambassador Theros jokes, “you can’t possibly have as much fun as I had!”

On a more somber note, he relays that the nature of American politics today and improved communications have changed the Foreign Service forever.

“In the past, they couldn’t be in contact with you twenty-four hours a day. But now, that’s completely changed. Before Skype, email, teleconferencing, and the ability to dial obscure villages in the middle of the mountains with little or no problems, (being in the Foreign Service was) a lot more fun,” he recounts. “You were given a responsibility and then expected to carry it out. Furthermore, American political life has become so politicized that American foreign policy is a residual of American domestic politics.”

Ambassador Theros’ multifaceted experiences in the Foreign Service served him well when he chose to pursue other avenues professionally. After his retirement, he remained involved in the private sector, advising governments, private sector corporations and non-governmental organizations in the United States, Europe and the Middle East. The Qatar Foreign Ministry asked Theros to lead the U.S.-Qatar Business Council, the preeminent bilateral trade organization advancing American and Qatari business relations, in 1999, of which he remains the President and Executive Director. Among his accomplishments in this capacity, Theros was instrumental in advising Qatar on the selection and negotiations with two major U.S. universities (Texas A&M and Georgetown University) and their establishment in the world-renowned Education City in Qatar.

"Israel afforded us a vital opportunity to raise awareness of our issues as an American Hellenic community as well as to learn more about issues of concern to Israel and Israel's perspective on developments in the region," Larigakis said. "For example, a greater understanding of how significant an issue Iran has become for Israel was presented. However, we also conveyed to our interlocutors how
